1. Accounting Services Division CRS Pilot Program
Treasury’s Office of Financial Innovation and Transformation (OFIT) is always looking for ways to streamline and save money on processes; therefore, they have launched the Centralized Receivable Service (CRS) pilot program. This program allows agencies to focus on their mission and leave the debt collection work to the CRS staff. CRS collections will be processed by US Bank.

The pilot program started on May 20, 2013. The process begins when the Office of Retail Securities identifies the receivable to be collected. They put comments into their system called SIEBEL, and they send the information to the Accounting Services Division (ASD) for processing. At that time, ASD handles the accounting processes and then transfers servicing and collection of the invoice to CRS staff. CRS automatically starts the billing process the next day. They handle all the collections aspects including letters, phone calls, and other collection correspondence and follow up. CRS continues to send invoices and contact the debtor until the debt is paid or until the debt is 90 days past due. After 92 days, the information is forwarded to Debt Management Service’s cross servicing program.

2. GTAS Decision to Move Forward
Treasury and the Office of Management and Budget recently announced the decision to go live with Governmentwide Treasury Account Symbol Adjusted Trial Balance System (GTAS) as of December 2013. GTAS will replace Federal Agencies Centralized Trial Balance System (FACTS) I, Intragovernmental Reporting and Analysis System (IRAS), Intragovernmental Fiduciary Confirmation System (IFCS) and FACTS II for financial and budgetary reporting. Moving to one centralized system will make the reporting process more consistent and complete and will allow better analysis of the financial data.

We have been working with Treasury in testing and communicating any issues identified. Treasury recognizes there are still some outstanding issues, and they are committed to resolving these issues prior to the go live date in December. We will continue to test and monitor our systems to ensure we are ready for the GTAS go live date.
